What is a Medical Summary Report and how will it benefit my client and the case?

CrossRoads Medical Legal Consulting Answer:

Are you having trouble getting medical reports from treating physicians before or after you take on a Personal Injury case, especially if there are multiple physicians involved? Do you find that you are then spending time trying to interpret all the records in order to develop your case? Do you have one or more expert witnesses who will provide an opinion about one aspect of the case but then leave it up to you to pull everything together?

One of the most important services that CrossRoads Medical Legal Consulting provides is to produce comprehensive Medical Summary Reports which synthesize all the medical data that encompasses the entire case, including all the medical issues, causation and mechanism of injury, functional losses and necessary future medical care for every injury/medical problem. We quote directly from the medical records, an interview with your client if necessary, and the pertinent medical literature to give you a complete and comprehensive picture of the case, including our medical opinions, which Medical Legal nurses and other mid-level practitioners may not be qualified to provide.

Medical Summary Reports can be used in two ways. The reports can be used to help attorneys do the medical coordination on the case. Medical Summary Reports may also be submitted as part of a settlement demand letter. We make a concerted effort to write these reports in a way that both physicians and lay people understand.

We include the appropriate the headings in every Medical Summary Report

- Introduction
- Records reviewed
- History of events
- Medical literature citations
- Ongoing medical issues·
- Summary, including medical opinion

We tailor every report depending on the case and your specific needs. Other services we provide include:
